

Abstracts

The invention concerns a compass having an electro magnetic half-shell transformer energy transmission and opto electronic data transmission.

To avoid a slipping connection during the transfer of supply voltage at least one winding on the primary half-shell is connected to a controllable input voltage source via a H-bridge circuit, and at least one secondary winding having taps is provided at the other half-shell coil.